Pastors Corner

As a priest, I have had times when I've been treated rather poorly and have come close to saying, "This I don't need. Let them figure out how to handle this without me." There are times that I want to pack up and go home.

But then I have to ask myself, "Why are you here in the first place?" I often have to remind myself that I am a priest, and the people need a priest. When I realize that, I am far more open to letting God work through me.

Then I end up experiencing a great comfort and success in ministry in various ways because I realize that I have to be concerned with Christ, not with myself.

I am sure you have had similar situations. I am sure that every married person has had to be more concerned with caring for his or her spouse than with how he or she has been treated by that same spouse. One snaps at the other, and the other has various choices: retaliate and snap back, employ the old classic passive aggressive behavior known as the silent treatment, sulk, or say, "I'm sorry," and look for something to do together to ease the upset.

Certainly, the silliest words ever uttered by Hollywood were from the old movie, Love Story, "Love means never having to say you are sorry." No, love means always having to say you are sorry.

But that takes humility. Pride and marriage cannot co-exist, at least not peacefully. But through humility you can be like Jesus for each other. I am sure that every parent has had to swallow hard when their children have said something thoughtless.

We can't serve God when we are so concerned about how we are treated by others. Why? Why do we have to be more concerned with others than with our proper respect. That is the way that God works through us. When we are concerned with ourselves, or proper respect, vain-glory the reading calls it, then we make ourselves the center of our action instead of the work of God.

Fr. Tom Kennedy

Parish Announcements

The Youth of St. Thomas will be selling pumpkins and Fall decorations during the month of October to raise money for the 2016 World Youth Day Pilgrimage to Krakow Poland.
